She was looking for Eden, he said he did not care
They were a match made in heaven, on the road to somewhere
She was thinking that maybe he might, know a thing or two
He was hoping that some of what she had, might rub off on him too

And then their lives got hectic, now it's karmic stew

instrumental over first line of verse

Homo Erectus stood upon this Earth, and walked his way toward wisdom
In his wake, a trail of tears, and some baggage he brought with him Pulled from his bag a precious gem, a method guided by reason
Got tangled up with many other things, and now it's barely heeded

Historical dialectic, a synthesis of several points of view
A bunch of things got all knotted up, now it's karmic stew

instrumental over first line of verse

The champions of freedom, gave birth to a precocious child
She walks around in splendor, in the hallowed hallways of our minds
But she was bought by commerce, and so many of us have paid the price
The chains she wears, of laissez faire, are covered by her disguise

instrumental over first line of verse

A theoretical dialectic, a synthesis of several points of view
Somebody wrote the checks and, now it's karmic stew
