Based on a traditional song. Richie Havens had his own version as well.

I'm a stranger here Lord, I'm a stranger in this place

I'm a stranger here Lord, I'm a stranger in this place

Yeah, when I go home, I bear a stranger's face

It's hard to keep on talking, when friends don't want to hear
It's hard to keep on talking, when friends don't want to hear
I'm getting stranger every day, to the people I used to hold dear

The war goes on killin', and nobody wants to know
The war goes on killin', and nobody wants to know
Anyway they're strangers, hardly worth countin' them at all

In the homeland they're forgettin', everything they once believed
In the homeland they're forgettin', everything they once believed
And strangers, they aren't welcome, they're being forced to leave

Gonna go off to someplace, where I don't feel so strange
Gonna go off to someplace, where I don't feel so strange
Gonna go to a place, where I don't need to feel ashamed

Gonna take a slow train, gonna change to another track
Gonna take a slow train, gonna change to another track
Gonna ride the peace train, and I ain't coming back
